Whether the Democrats mismanaged the battle of Argonne or not, there will be plenty of other good reasons for putting them all out in 1920.

Of course, there was no danger of Jim Crow legislation by the Missouri general assembly this year and some people are wondering if there is any danger of legislation toward the other extreme.

During the past month President Wilson has no doubt heard from the French people that among the most daring and invincible of the American forces were the Negro soldiers, and this will make Mr. Wilson very happy—he is so proud of the achievements of colored folks.

The same people who were saying a year ago that the Germans would attack and destroy the city of Paris, are now saying that the booze barons will march down the halls of Congress and throw the defile into the face of National Prohibition. It's astonishing how bright some people are along the line of prophecy.

HARVEY'S MINSTRELS.

Harvey's minstrels are back at the Boyd, giving a bang-up entertainment to the delight of the crowds that assembled yesterday. The organization is well calculated to revive all the merriment and monkeyshines of the traditional minstrel show, at the same time preserving the modern notions of ragtime and jazz, so that everybody can have a little something as the program rolls along. Clarence Powell and Ed. Tolliver still lead the funmaking, each supreme in his own way, but Frank Kirk, Joe Means and other comedians contribute to the laughter. Kirk's musical act is one hard to equal, and Joe Means' song about "Somebody Done Me Wrong" brings a riot even Bert Williams would be proud of. Little Miss Cannon does a buck and wing dance of the old-fashioned sort that really is a treat in these days when that sort of footwork is seldom seen. In the olio are a number of specialty acts, each worth watching, while the singing is of high order and very enjoyable. The engagement is for four nights, and another matinee will be played on Wednesday—Omaha (Neb.) Bee, Dec. 16, 1918.

This company will be at the Auditorium Sunday, Tuesday, Wednesday, February 23, 25, 26.

FOR SALE—PRICE $1,800.
